Blue and Gray Mingle Again at Gettysburg.

NORTH CAROLINA DAY

Eloquent Addresses Made by Southerners at the Spot Where, Forty Years Ago, They Met Northerners in Fierce Conflict.

especial to The Times-Dispatch.) GETTYSBURG, PA., July 3.—Confederate and Union veterans gathered here today in a grand reunion of blue and gray to celebrate the fortleth anniversary o the battle of Gettysburg. This was the third day of the celebration, but the first in which Southerners took part.

The notable event of the day was th

in which Southerners took part.

The notable event of the day was the celebration of the charge of Pickett, Pettigrew and Trimble, at the very hour it occurred forty years ago, and at "High Water Mark," where the Confederates pressed furthest into the Federal lines in that desperate onslaught. This celebration was under the auspices of the North Carolina Society of Baltimore, which brought over a large number of Southerners on a special train.

Led by the Gettyaburg G. A. R. Post band, the "Tar Heels" sang their State song, "The Old North State."

Major W. M. Robbins, of Statesville, N. C., one of the three national commissioners in charge of the Gettyaburg battlefield, welcomed the Southerners and spoke of the wonderful bravery of Lee's men in that thrilling struggle. In closing, he thanked heaven that the country was once more reunited and the sections at peace with each other and the world.

FORTY YEARS AFTER.

The band played "The Blue and the Gray" as Colonel John R. Lane, the veteral who led the famous Twenty-sixth North Carolina regiment in the charge, was introduced to the cheering thousands. With Colonel Lane was Mr. Charles H. McConnell, a Michigan member of the "Iron Brigade," who fought and desperately wounded Colonel Lane near the stone fence, where they now clasped hands forty years after the bloody duel.

Colonel Lane, who still bears the marks of his terrible experience, told in his own clasped hands forty years after the bloody duel.

Colonel Lane, who still bears the marks of his terrible experience, told in his own way the wonderful story of the most famous of North Carolina regiments, which at Gettysburg went into Pickett's charge with $59 men and came out under command of a leutenant, having lost 705 men, the largest loss recorded in the Civil War. One company was entirely wiped out. The three colonels of this regiment were Zebulon B. Vance, afterwards Governor and United States Senator: Harry K. Burgwyn, the daring and gallant young soldier, and John R. Lane. His speech aroused the greatest entuslasm.

Probably for the first time since the war on this battlefield the band played "Dixle," while Northerners and Southerners joined in the cheering.

Professor Henry E. Shepherd, of Baltimore, who entered the Confederate ser-wounded at Gettysburg, then spoke on "What North Carolina Did at Gettys-wounded at Gettysburg, then spoke on "What North Carolina Did at Gettysburg."

CAROLINA AT GETTYSBURG.

"Nothing exhibits in so impressive and appealing a light the rare and wonderful role of North Carolina at Gettysburg as the rectal of the losses in killed and wounded sustained by her troops during the three days of unrest and relentless strife. There is in such a mode of procedure no appeal to sentiment no invocation of sympathy. It is the portrayal of historic truth in the calm, cold light of mathematical analysis, the passionless inexorable logic of figures and of rigd. pervasive scrutiny attesting their truth and conveying their own lesson. The entire Confederate loss in the battle of Gettysburg is estimated at 23,000 or about one-third of Lee's army engaged in the conflict. The figures are drawn from the most authentic records and their accuracy may be conceded without essential modification or change in either direction. Nearly 2,090 Confederates were killed upon the field. Of this number our own State lost 700, more than one-fourth of the entire array that passed to an instantaneous death. From 14,000 to 15,600 Confederates were wounded. Including her killed. Nerth Carolina lost at Gettysburg near 5,000 men, between one-fourth and one-fifth of the entire casualties encountered by Lee's army. This encourage is no perfectly trustworthy account available.

"Fitteen North Carolina regiments took part in the incomparable assault of July 3d, which has plased into history as Tlekett's charge." The North Carolina troops advanced farther into the works of the enemy than those of any other State, and were the last to retire from the field they had crowned with their valor. Every hillside, barn or humble retreat was marked by the presence of our wounded or dying. Our wounded lay in improvised hospitals; our dead rested in humble undesignated graves and blended with the indiscriminate dust. Never in all the annals of all the ages had fidelity to a cause, devotion to an imperishable conviction, so signalized itself in heroic empire, brillant achievement—deeds compared with which Waterloo, Wagram and Balakava, idealized and giorified by poetle grace and romantic halo, hide their diminished heads.

"Out of a white population of 630,000 in the Waterloo and the same with the control of the control of the works and the control of the contro

"Out of a white population of 630,000 in 1550 North Carolina supplied to the armies of the South at least 120,000 men, or approximately one-fifth of the entire military forces of the Confederacy during the period embraced in the Civil War. Her just or logical proportion would have been more nearly one-tenth than one-fifth."

the period embraced in the Civil War. Her just or logical proportion would have been more nearly one-tenth than one-fifth."

Mr. Shepherd protested with especial emphasis against the erroneous and misleading impression disseminated by Northern historians to the effect that the batter of Gettysburg virtually assured the overthrow of the Confederate cause.

SUPERB ACHIEVEMENT.

"Such an opinion is either the inspiration of malice or the outcome of impenetrable ignorance," he said. "Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor, the Crater, were fought and won in the year succeeding Gettysburg (1864), when her crests and vales, fertile with the blood of our brothers, had relapsed to their normal quietude and their placid rest. Eight thousand Federal troops lay prostrate in 20 minutes at Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864, and before our murderous sheet of fame Grant's line of battle remained doggedly still. No force, moral or physical, could urge them into the jaws of inevitable death. We stood then upon the verge of success. The prize seemed in our grasp."

Mr. Shepherd recalled many striking incidents of the Civil War which were intended to illustrate special acts of personal heroism or humanity on the part of North Carolina troops. He himself assisted in saving the life of a Wisconsin colonel, who, having been shot in the lungs, was left in the Confederate lines and was in peril from the fire of his own men. The officer recovered and lived until 1897, carrying the North Carolina bullet into the grave with him.

In closing he said that the superb achievements of our State should be commemorated in stone or marble with all the appealing grace and imploring beauty of art requires no demonstration. The angel is in the shore or rehetorical embellishment:

Whatever record leap to light
She never shall be shamed.

After the band had played "My Country, "Tis of Thee," Colonel W. H. S. Burgwyn, of Weldon, brother of the darling Colonel Harry Burgwyn, was introduced, and made a brief address. Then Mr. M. J. Nolley, a Baltimore veteran, made a brief, but eloquent, speech.

The band closed the programme with: "The Star-Spangled Banner," Southerners and Northerners singing together: "The Star-Spangled Banner, O long may it wave

"I saw Mr. Payne for a few moments only last night, but our conversation was general, and no reference was made to the postoffice scandal, nor was the name of Perry S. Heath mentioned."

Senator Kearns added that he did not own the Sait Lake City newsaper in which Mr. Heath is interested, but that he was a stockholder, like the former Arsistant Postmaster-General.

Besides Senator Kearns, Mr. Payne saw among the earliest of his visitors to-day Richard C. Kerens, of St. Louis, and David Keith, of the Sait Lake Tribune.

ROUSS SUIT

Widow of Son Wants Part of Estate.

LETTERS FROM FATHER

They Are Referred to as Love Letters Too-Claims of a Settlement Hav-

John J. Rooney, counsel for the Rouss estate, declared that the case had not been settled.

"We haven't settled it and haven't paid one cent," said Mr. Rooney. "That statement is not true."

Lawyer Rooney would not admit that the plaintiff was the legal wife of Charles H. B. Rouse, but said the other side alleged that Peter Rouss said the Rouss estate had not denied that Mrs. Katherine Rouss was his brother's wife. "There is no suit," Mr. Rouss said at first. "That matter is all settled. Mrs. Fatherine Rouss and I are on good terms. We did not pay her one cent. "It is bosh to talk about letters from my father to her. My brother Charles died long before my father died, so naturally he was not mentioned in the will. The woman who had assumed his name was not mentioned, and she has never got one cent from the estate. "We have not set up any particular denial that she was my brother's legal wife, but we haven't agreed to any settlement, giving her any part of the estate. She is not entitled to anything." Mr. Rous was rather evasive and in one breath would say there was no suit and in the next would say it had all been settled. Lawyer Joseph said he had plenty of proofs to establish the fact that his client was the lawful wife of Charles H. B. Rouss, and said the relationship was recognized in the letters from Charles Broadway Rouss to Mrs. Katherine Rouss.

The letters are addressed to "Dear Kate," and Lawyer Joseph says they are just the letters that would be written by a fond father, in-law to his son's wife. Still he referred to them as Jove letters.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over. 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, bus the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

of Atlanta, at 10 o'clock, on Monday, the 20th of July, for the purpose of conferring and agreeing on some uniform plan of procedure in the prosecution of their work. The most absolute accuracy possible in the compilation and publication of these rosters is desirable, to the end that no injustice be done any soldier of the South. The name, and a brief military history, of every officer and man who was in the Confederate army or navy should appear in the rosters to be published by the Secretary of War at Washington, and the name of every impostor should be excluded.

Owing to the loss or destruction of many of the original rosters during the progress and since the close of the war, our task is difficult, and unless extraordinary effort is made to establish correct copies of lost rolls, and to perfect imperfect ones now in existence, the publication to be made will possess but little value, and will do injustice to many gallant solders. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, July 3.—Still another suif by a woman against the estate of Charles Broadway Rouss appeared yesterony. Katherine Rouss, who claims to be the widow of Charles H. B. Rouss, a son of the merchant, is the plaintiff. Mrs. Rouss is represented by Abraham A. Joseph, of No. 302 Broadway.

Letters from Charles Broadway Rouss form the basis of the suit, and are the main evidence in the case. These letters have now been surrendered to Peter W. Rouss, who was recently substituted as executor of his father's estate.

The sum of $10,000 was paid for the letters, according to Lawyer Joseph. He said that the case had been settled, and that he had advised his client to accept the $10,000, which was exactly the amount offered her by Charles Broadway Rouss some time before his denth.

"The love letters have all been turned over and the settlement made," said Lawyer Joseph.

John J. Rooney, counsel for the Rouss estate, declared that the case had not been settled.
